

Unable to Gain Strength After Operation

Fredericksburg, Va.—"After I had gone through a very serious operation I could not regain my health and strength. I suffered with pains and aches all over and was also very nervous. My mother advised me taking Dr. Pierce's medicine. I took the 'Favorite Prescription' and the 'Golden Medical Discovery', alternately, and they soon built me up and seemed to give me new life. I heartily recommend these medicines to women who suffer with any sort of weakness."—MRS. W. S. COX, 908 Hanover St. All druggists.

Home Town Helps

BEAUTY COMES WITH GROWTH

American Towns, if They Are Well Planned, Will Develop Along Proper Artistic Lines.

We see American towns in the process of growth, and the slow transition from hastily erected "shacks," a one-story general store, a blacksmith shop (these are still needed), a garage nowadays, a church and a schoolhouse, into a flourishing community not always attractive. There is a period when there are no shade trees, when streets are dusty or muddy and unpaved, where there is an unfinished appearance about everything. It is not so many years since a large number of the towns and villages of Indiana had an unkempt, untrimmed look. Seen from trains in passing, they looked uninviting. As a matter of fact, the residents had other things to think of than beauty. They were building their homes, making their living by arduous labor, sending their children to school and sacrificing many desirable things for the sake of the necessities. This is the history of all towns.

The conditions are different now. Indiana is full of beautiful towns and small cities that were the "gopher prairies" of years ago. Beautiful homes, handsome lawns, paved and shaded streets, substantial business houses, attractive public buildings, including libraries, and a general air of prosperity distinguish them. The same people live there who were there at the beginning. When they and their children came to the point where beauty and luxury could be added to the necessities of living, they reached out and provided them. It is the way with American towns.—Indianapolis Star.

ASSIST IN BUILDING HOMES

Associations Through the Country Teach Thrift and at the Same Time Make Good Citizens.

Pointing out that a man who owns his own home probably will be a good citizen, C. Clinton James, president of the Building Associations' council for the District of Columbia, issued a statement showing what building associations in the district are doing to encourage home owning and thrift.

While complete figures are not available, it is estimated that the total assets of building associations in Washington will be more than $28,000,000, he announced.

"The building associations throughout the country are teaching thrift and trying to educate the public to own their own homes," Mr. James stated. "The motto of the United States League of Local Building and Loan Associations is 'The American Home—the Safeguard of American Liberties.'"

"The building associations have assisted very largely in solving the housing question by assisting persons of limited means to finance the buying of their home, but the demand for loans has been much greater than the funds available," it is asserted.

While building associations are not as necessary in smaller towns as in the cities, the same idea expressed in community spirit will work out to the desired result in the end.

Give a Hand.

In every community there are successful men—men of experience, men of means. In every community there are young men who might make a success of life. They have it in them; all they lack is some one to give a hand. It may not be money they need, perhaps only an interested friend. Somebody helps whenever a young man gets started right in anything. Somewhere every successful man got a start by some one's help. To keep the world moving on an upward slope the process must be made perpetual. Each man, once started, should become a starter of others. And who starts another gets himself along at a more rapid gait. There is that in helping another that reflects no credit alone to the agent, but a bent of mind, an outlook on life, a generosity of soul, that wins a way forward for himself also.—Thrift Magazine.

Set Out Hedge Plants.

There are few homes that could not be made more attractive by a frame setting of hedge plants, not necessarily a tall-growing hedge that would inclose the grounds, but a low-growing one to mark the boundary of the home grounds and add a certain amount of privacy.

Trees Benefit Community.

Nothing that costs so little adds so much to the appearance of a community as do tree-lined streets. Comfort and beauty alike are served, and there is cash in a shady walk wherever homes are far sale.

Begin to Recognize Truth.

Far-seeing business men have come to realize that it is the country that makes the cities and not the cities that make the country.

Plant Shrubs Now.

Now is a good time to plan for some flowers and shrubs around the house. They are worth the little extra care they make.

"We've paid our debt to Lafayette—who the heck do we owe now?"
"When the cruel war is over."
"Say 'ah-h-h' and sign here."
"Let's eat."

"HALF AND HALF"

JURY DISAGREES

Owensboro, Ky., Apr. 7.—There was another mistrial in the prosecution against Penn Taylor, negro, accused of assaulting and robbing Jesse Coomes, street car motorman, several months ago. There were six women and six men on the jury and after considering the case 45 minutes this morning they reported there was no chance to agree on a verdict.

Judge Slack told them they had not had time to consider the case very seriously and sent them back to the jury room. Shortly before the noon hour they filed into the courtroom with the announcement that there was no chance to agree. It is understood that they stood 10 to 2 for conviction. The two for acquittal were: Mrs. Gamble Stuart and Mrs. John Gilmore, it was learned. On a former trial of the case, the jury stood six and six.

There were no other cases set for trial today, and Judge Slack dismissed the jury until Friday morning.

REGARDED AS CERTAIN

Washington, April 11.—Suggestions as to the means of raising the $4,000,000,000 of revenue necessary for the conduct of the national government during the next fiscal year will be sent to Congress early next week, Secretary Mellon said. Discussion of sources which may be tapped by the new tax programme will be concluded probably by the treasury secretary and his staff of advisers.

Thus far, it was stated, definite decision has been reached on only one question, repeal of the excess profits tax. Mr. Mellon has not decided what form of levy will supplant it.

The whisky is to be stored in the warehouse of the Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Company. Extra gaugers are at work gauging the whisky, but the company is not required to tax-pay the whisky until it is sold.

THE HONEYMOON

By MARGARET A. SWEENEY.

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
"I'll not pay it—you're profiteering!" Philip Crosby was angry. "I'll get out, you can have your house. You think—"

The door slammed and Crosby stood looking through the glass at his landlord's disappearing back.

It was the Crosbys' wedding anniversary, and every year, for 15 years, Philip Crosby had celebrated the event by closing his office and taking Mrs. Crosby on a one-day "honeymoon."

This time with his landlord was annoying. It would upset Helen, he reflected, as he turned from the door and climbed the stairs to his wife's room.

"That was Haskins for the rent," he told her, "and he said that it would be $10 more after this month."

Mrs. Crosby, standing before her mirror, adjusting her new fall hat, was silent.

Philip Crosby's attention seemed suddenly attracted to the rug at his feet. He had caught the meaning of his wife's silence. He remembered how often—how very often—she had pleaded with him to buy a house—"a real home, Philip, a roof we can call our own." Her words had come back to him now, "a few hundred or a thousand down, Philip, and the rest as rent, and we—we can get along without a car, but we must have our own roof."

And he remembered, too, that after the arrival of the new car Helen never spoke to him again about buying a house. The subject had become taboo.

"I am ready, Philip."

Crosby was brought back from his reminiscent mood by the touch of his wife's hand upon his shoulder.

"I was just wishing, Helen, that—that I had taken your advice and—not put so much money into that car—I—I don't blame you to—to be sore about it and—"

"Well, we won't talk about it today, Philip," Mrs. Crosby had begun to do something to her husband's tie. "We'll go along on our 'honeymoon' and forget our troubles."

Philip Crosby's face brightened, and he stooped and kissed the patient little woman who had so loyally shared his ups and downs—mostly downs, for Philip Crosby was not the kind of a man that amasses money.

"Where are you going to take me, Philip?" Helen Crosby asked as they went downstairs.

"Anywhere you say, Helen; the car is all ready. I had just finished cleaning it when old Skinfat Haskins came along—we—we must find a house that has a garage—I—"

"I do wish that motorcars were built big enough to—to keep house in—it would solve the housing problem for many families," Mrs. Crosby remarked from the open doorway as she surveyed the graceful lines of the big gray car, "and—just think—some of them cost as much as a comfortable house—and their upkeep is—"

"Well, we won't talk about it today, Helen," Philip Crosby chuckled as his wife stepped into the car, "we'll go along on our 'honeymoon' and forget our troubles."

Helen Crosby laughed—they laughed easily, these two, who were all and all to each other. Her husband took his place beside her and the big car swung out into the clear September sunshine.

"Have you seen the new bungalows on Grove Hill, Philip?" Helen persisted; "there are eleven—perfectly charming six-room affairs and no two alike. I wish you would take me up there before we go home."

"I'll take you up now, but no doubt they are all rented—the location is good."

The white and green bungalows on Grove Hill were good to look upon, standing wide apart among towering trees, with screened verandas, sun parlors, garages and garden plots—they looked good to Philip Crosby.

"That one with the chimney on the outside is, to me, the most 'homey' looking," Mrs. Crosby pointed to a bungalow standing back from the street where the car had stopped; "let us get out and look at it."

They walked up the neat asphalt path and tried the door. It was locked. "Try the side door, Philip; maybe some of the carpenters are out around the garage."

When Philip Crosby had disappeared around the corner of the house Helen began to fumble in her beaded bag. She fished out the key and let herself into the house, leaving the door open behind her.

When the astonished Philip walked in a few minutes later his wife was standing in the hall, nervously dangling the key.

"How in—what the—" Crosby groped for words. Helen Crosby handed the key to him and her firm little hands went up and gripped his shoulders and her frank eyes looked into his.

"It is your house, Philip. I paid for it with your money—you big, generous boy—you always gave me more than I needed to run the house, and every week since that first week fifteen years ago I have put away a few dollars, and—"

Philip Crosby's arms tightened about the loyal little woman.

After a little while they returned to the big gray car. They were smiling, but their eyes were wet.
